FAIR PLAY. Hosomur. August 8th, 1871.

Mr. Epiron.-An article lately appeared in the Advertiser headed "Native Physicians," and in which it seems to be tacitly admitted that the Hawaiian race is dying out. If true, the reasons assigned are manifestly insufficient to account for its decline. The habits of the people are not worse, are not more depraved now than they were one handred years ago. Hence this is not the

The native kahupas are probably as honest and intelligent to-day as their predecessors were a hundred years ago. Hence their special agency cannot be the cause. Again, if true, there must be a cause. It is not now my province to inquire.- What? It is true that the population now suffer from deadly diseases which did not exist among them in their previous happy state. It is fair to presume that following schedule: the kahunas have no knowledge of the true nature or proper treatment of these diseases. It is also fair to presume that the active medication ignorantly administered by the kabunas is injurious and sometimes fatal, just as the heroic dosing of an ignorant white physician is injurious and fatal. It is also stated that the natives have faith in their kahunas, and have not confidence in the treatment of foreign doctors.

What is the remedy? The first step is patent. but perhaps unattainable at present, namely: to educate the people. In the murch of education unfounded prejudices are swept away. It does not require much information to know that the science is the same the world over. That the science of medicine is the same in Paris as on Molokai in Dublin as in Hilo, in Berlin as in Honolala.

Is it proper for ministers of religion to inculcate worldly wisdom as well as to teach the truths of the Gospel? If so, this fact might be made known to the people by them.

Are there outside of Honolala doctors enough for, and within reach of, the scattered population? I believe not. (In this connection I exclude all but duly qualified medical men, knowing that there is no greater evil in any community than an ignorant, eneducated and self-sufficient practitioner of medicine.)

Is it possible to supply this want?

It is both possible and practicable. . Not by an inflax of physicians from abroad. They could not, in country places, receive a remuneration to satisfy them for their time and and is al service. How then?
